FIVE CHURCHES UNITE IN KU KLUX KLAN PROGRAM AT MOKENA; ST. JOHN CROWDED TO CAPACITY

Don C. Hall

The meeting of the Ku Klux Klan in Mokena Sunday evening March 8th was an event of unusual importance and significance, marking as it does the possibility of at least a temporary amalgamation of Fraternal and Religious organizations of this community and vicinity in a common purpose, and that purpose the perfecting of an undivided activity in our allegiance to God and native land.

The stranger within our gates on last Sunday evening would have been attracted at an early hour by a scene of activity upon our usually quiet streets and thoroughfares. Large numbers of automobiles bearing license plates from practically all neighboring rural communities, towns and cities including Joliet and Chicago, were streaming in to parking places in the avenues leading to and adjoining our district of churches. The walks were filled with a hurrying throng all moving in the same general direction and the stranger getting into the swing of the moving assembly could not resist being swept along toward the imposing structure of which Mokena is so justly proud, St. John's Evangelical Church.

Thru the hospitably opened door there was to be had, a glimpse of the beautiful interior, with its high vaulted ceiling, its massive appearing architecture, its raised green carpeted aisle, completed with furnishings of oak, the great pipe organ, the rows of seats for the choir and the commodious auditorium flooded in the mellow light of an excellently arranged and adequate lighting system, and as the stranger entered he was met at the portal by friendly hands extended in greeting, and as he passed into the rapidly filling house of God, he had been conducted to a convenient seat, on glancing at the neatly printed program which had been placed in his hand, he read the significant words "Program given under the auspices of the Ku Klux Klan".

For some days, by word passed, and thru the local press, announcement had been made of the meeting, and although the weather was rather unpleasant it seemingly did not dampen the ardor of the citizens either at home or from abroad.

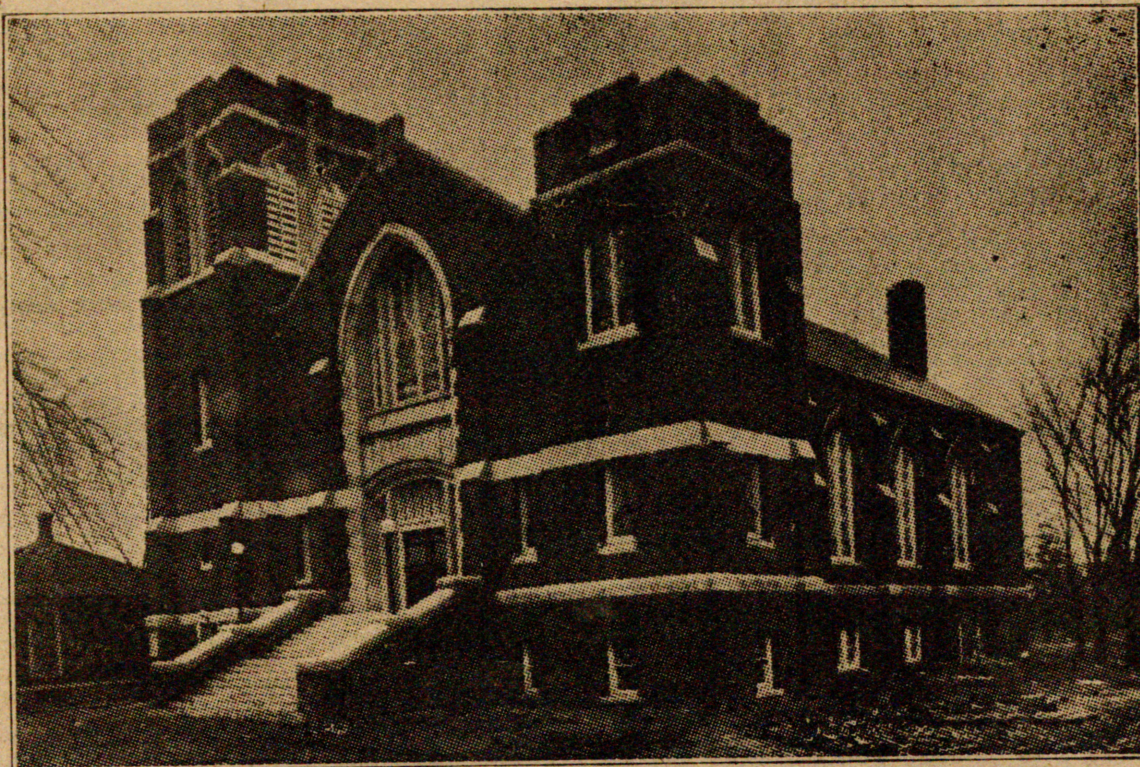

It was not a spirit of idle curiosity that turned their steps in the direction of St. John's on that particular evening; rather were they prompted by a one hundred percent desire to help do something, that had a tendency toward real, tangible results. All looking for, hoping for, and confidently expecting Harmony in the great community gathering.

At promptly 7:45 o'clock with the audience still pouring in, and the ushers rushing for extra seats for the belated ones, the bell in the tower began to send out its voice in mighty appeal and an acclaim to the world that the momentous ceremonies were about to commence.

As we sat awaiting the Voluntary, we received our first inkling of a possible discord in the proceedings—there was no possible question of a divided allegiance to Spiritual Ideals among those present. Yet one could not be so certain that there was in reality, the existing fellow feeling so necessary to assure the success of important community work.

Even the casual observer realized before the program was fairly started, that someone especially conversant with the personality and characteristics of the speakers had grouped them in the order of their susceptibility to the call of modern modes and methods of propaganda for promoting the general welfare of all the people in an one hundred percent endeavor to create an one hundred percent allegiance to God and Country.

St. John Evangelical Church, Mokena

For the first time in the local history this church was the scene of a bringing together of five separate congregations by the Klan. At this service Rev. G. Lambrecht of Frankfort created quite a live furor when he said that no lodge or any secret organization can take the place of the church.

The inspiring music, the singing of America by the audience, the prayer for guidance and strength, and the introductory remarks by the Rev. Wm. Kreis, resident pastor of St. John's, who warmly welcomed the visiting Klansmen and friends were impressive.

The vocal selection by the Mokena mixed quartette was splendidly rendered and was especially appropriate.

The opening address was delivered by Rev. A. R. Mangus of the Mokena Methodist church, who had been seated near the central dividing line that separated the three principle speakers from those affiliated with the pastorate of the St. John Evangelical church. The audience gave no attention to the speaker who preached his address with the statement that he was not a member of the Ku Klux Klan, but was in full accord and sympathy with them in their endeavors to lift the burden of lawlessness from a long suffering people which brought forth the first ripple of applause from the sedate body of assembled Klansmen. His discourse was in strict accordance with his chosen scriptural text, and was delivered fluently and impressively, leaving no doubt in the minds of the listeners as to his determination to lead men in their various activities of life to make the very best of themselves in whatever line of endeavors they might be engaged and in spite of established precedent of Ancestry, to establish a code of ethics in Religion which would lead all safely along the road to Righteousness.

The Male quartette from Frankfort rendered a splendid selection and had applause been in order they would have found it necessary to respond to an anchor.

The Rev. A. L. Brown of the Marley community church was then introduced in a few well chosen words by Rev. Kreis, whose diplomacy was noticeably evident. To say that Rev. Brown's address was masterly would be putting it mildly. His style of delivery was magnetic, and his points were driven home to stay, and from an evident fund of knowledge and wisdom, he selected seven of the most salient subjects for quick action use. He made it clear and convincing that he stands for united concerted action along the broadest possible lines for the advancement of God's Kingdom through the instrumentality of love of the home, love of country, education and understanding with trust, confidence and belief in the Power of Almighty God to bring order out of chaos. His remarks were interspersed with apt illustrations and in his reference to the Ku Klux Klan, he showed, so it is said, a remarkable knowledge of their precepts, principles and the inner workings of their order.

One of the most pleasing features of the evening, was the duet rendered by Mrs. Mable Mall and Miss Frieda Zumstein and we would suggest that where such excellent numbers are given on Sunday evenings, anchors should be arranged for and given without the necessity for applause.

Rev. B. T. Duncan of the Frankfort Methodist church was the last regular speaker of the evening, and in his talk was an able spokesman for the Klan. If there were prejudices, they surely should have been banished under the spell of his oratory and manful assurance of the worthy intentions of those who are enlisted as followers of the Flery Cross, and who stand with out individual prejudice for True Americanism in the sight of God and Man.

The Frankfort Male quartette followed with another splendid selection.

Up to this time if anything had been said or done to which he could not have responded with a fervent Amen, the writer failed to sense it. But right there, came like a bolt from a clear sky, the element, which to some, illustrates the absolute futility of an attempted affiliation in any project of real advancement with the old war horses of sectarianism, and brought the first break in the close of a perfect Day. The way for the few interpolated remarks of an invidious character which were spoken by a lovable, venerable gentleman of the cloth, Rev. G. Lambrecht of the Evangelical church of Frankfort, was paved by Rev. Kreis who forgetting for the moment his studied diplomacy, let it leak out, rather forcibly that he "of course did not agree in many of the statements that had been made, all of which was taken in good part by the speakers and audience, but Rev. Lambrecht went much farther questioning a statement which he claimed had been made by one of the speakers to the effect that all "Klansmen were Christians and perfect," and seemingly forgetful of the admonition to "Judge not," assumed the responsibility by saying, he "knew it was not true and cited as an evidence of his contention "that some of them were not seen in church over once a year."

This expression brought forth a denial from Rev. Duncan that such a statement had been made, and if his remarks had been so construed they were not necessarily so intended. He spoke in the highest terms of Rev. Lambrecht, whom he held in the highest esteem, in fact, whom "he loved as a brother". At this point Rev. Kreis again made connections with his diplomatic proclivities, and the somewhat discouraged, but fully aroused audience gradually subsided while repeating the Lord's Prayer and singing the grand old song "Onward Christian Soldiers", and were dismissed by a benediction pronounced by Rev. Lambrecht.

And as the large audience of representative citizens wended their way from the House dedicated to the worship of God, conscious of an evening profitably spent, a visit-

Big Wreck At New Lenox Ties Up the Wabash Railroad

The Wabash railroad had a bad tie up last Saturday night, when a northbound freight train was derailed at New Lenox about midnight when the tread of a wheel of a freight car broke off causing the car to leave the track and dragging 20 more cars with it. The place where the wreck occurred is on a high line north of New Lenox and near to the bridge spanning the R. I. tracks. The cars rolled down the high elevation and were for the most part badly wrecked.

The cars were chiefly loaded with coal and lumber. The wreck tied up the single track line for many hours. Two wrecking cranes were kept busy all day Sunday and Monday clearing up the wreck.

News-Bulletin Installs Fast New Cylinder Press

The past week The News-Bulletin has had a new and faster press installed to enable the handling of the ever increasing business of the paper and to issue a larger paper at a faster speed.

The new press of which a picture is shown herewith, is a Century two revolution press and can be speeded up to produce 2700 impressions per hour. This press has cut the press time of the paper in more than half. Where it formerly took four to five hours and more to print The News-Bulletin the same work can now be done in an hour and a half. In addition to cutting down on press time, the new press produces neater work. All kinds of job work from posters to fine programs, etc., can be handled on this press.

The press is equipped with many labor saving devices and is a very smooth running machine.

Now bring on your new subscriptions and advertisements as well as job work for the new press is always hungry and wants to be fed right along.

When we first opened a small printing office in 1916 with a 5x8 hand press and a few fonts of type we had no idea that the business would develop so fast that within 9 years we would grow into a real business with quarters four times as big as when we started and in addition are equipped with a linotype, job press and cylinder press in addition to hundreds of pounds of type.

This remarkable growth of the News-Bulletin is entirely due to the liberal patronage accepted it by the people of the community in which it circulates and for which we are duly appreciative. We hope to be favored with this same liberal patronage in the future and will be ever on the alert to turn out a real quality product and to boost for the interests of the communities we serve. Our aim is to make The News-Bulletin a welcome visitor in every home in this section.

When the editor first established The News-Bulletin in 1919 he was told the undertaking would be a failure and many discouraging things occurred but the liberal public support has shown that The News-Bulletin has a mission and it is this fact that has made this paper the success it is.

Visitors are always welcome at the News-Bulletin plant. We shall be glad to have you call and see the home of your community newspaper.

Mr. Ed. Nolden of the Wanner Machinery Company of Chicago had charge of installing the press.

Undersea City
Submerged 30 feet below the surface of the Mediterranean sea, off the coast of Tunis, the ruins of an ancient city have been found by divers. They report that many large stone buildings were visible, outlined in dim shadows and sandy bottom, and that fish swam in and out of crumbled doorways. Scientists are preparing to make further explorations. Additional interest is attached to the discovery, as the city lies in waters described by Virgil and near the "Isle of the Lotus Eaters," of which Homer sang.

"IT IS TOO LATE"

SYNOPSIS.—Nurses in the Southern hospital at Avonmouth are angered by the insolent treatment accorded them by Dr. John Lancaster, head of the institution, and there is a general feeling of unrest, into which Joan Wentworth, probationary nurse, is drawn. Doctor Lancaster is performing a difficult operation, for which he has won fame. Joan, with other nurses, is in attendance. She is upset, through no fault of her own, and makes a trivial blunder at a critical moment. The patient dies and Doctor Lancaster accuses her of clumsiness. She is suspended, the action meaning the end of her hope of a career as a nurse. Without relatives or friends, and desperate, Joan, urged by her landlady, goes to Doctor Lancaster's office to ask him to overlook her blunder and reinstate her. She overhears a violent altercation between Doctor Lancaster and other men she does not see. Joan is struck by the favorable change in the appearance and demeanor of the doctor, recalling that at times in the hospital he has been gentle and thoughtful and at others supercilious and bullying. He tells her he can do nothing for her at the hospital, but offers her a position in a nursing institution in the country, telling her she can be of "great assistance" to him. A man named Myers demands she tell him what the doctor had said to her. She denies him the information, and he covertly threatens her. At the institution, which is owned by Doctor Lancaster, Joan finds Myers. He tells her he is the secretary. She instinctively dislikes and fears him. The only patient at the institution is a Mrs. Dana, a demented but harmless. Joan is vaguely uneasy, feeling that there is some mystery about the place. Doctor Lancaster arrives. Joan accuses him of deceiving her, declaring her intention of leaving. He tells her he is the patient who needs her, saying he wants help in a "big fight," but makes no further explanation. She decides to stay. Evidently Doctor Lancaster is afraid of Myers.

"There is no reason why you should not see him because he happens to be with Mr. Myers."

"Well, Miss Wentworth, you see, Mr. Myers is his secretary, and there's always a lot of business to be done."

"Doctor Jenkins, Doctor Lancaster is in no condition to attend to business," said Joan. "What is the matter with him?"

The doctor looked right and left, as if trying to find some refuge. But the girl was standing in front of him, and he could not enter the buggy without embarrassing her away.

"Miss Wentworth, please don't ask me about the doctor," he said. "I do my best for him. It isn't in my power to do more than I am doing."

"It is in your power to help him to be master of himself. How can the most famous surgeon in the South come here and be at the mercy of a man like Myers?"

"Why, Miss Wentworth, you've got that wrong," protested Jenkins. "Mr. Myers is only the secretary. Mr. Myers does all he can for the doctor. We've got to keep the institution together, Miss Wentworth, and we're each doing our best. You see, the trust fund wasn't made over to the doctor. He was only in charge of it, and when the money was missing it worried him. And—"

He stopped, as if he had caught himself babbling about something that should not have been mentioned. Then, as Joan stood aside, he leaped into the vehicle. "Good morning," he muttered, raising his hat, and drove away furiously.

Joan remained where the buggy had been. She realized that for the present she could get no help from Jenkins. He had seemed afraid, not for himself, but for Lancaster. What had Lancaster done, then, that he should be in the power of Myers? Had he embezzled the funds of the institution?

The question was an absurd one. It was unbelievable that Lancaster should be a thief; besides, the explanation would not solve the problem at all.

She went back to the veranda. She was resolved to reach the bottom of the mystery, for Lancaster's sake; to prove her loyalty although he had withdrawn his demand on her.

As she reached the front door she was startled to hear her name spoken in the matron's room. The speaker was Myers.

"But she knows nothing at all," Mrs. Fraser was saying.

"She knows a good deal too much," Myers answered. "What do you suppose the doctor brought her here for, if not to try to publish his shame to the world?"

"Aye, his shame," repeated the matron bitterly. "It's hard work for three people to try to hold up one man, without a fourth coming in."

"Well, is that his game?" demanded the secretary. "Is it or isn't it?"

"We want a nurse. You know we've often tried to get one, Mr. Myers, but they won't stay here. It's hard work taking care of the patients sometimes, when there's a rush."

"Rush!" repeated Myers scornfully. "Who'd rush to this old place with the doctor's reputation?"

"They do come, and the people trust him," said Mrs. Fraser, half crying.

"Yes," scoffed the other. "And the doctor still has his grandiose ideas about building up the institution—him that wrecked it."

"Well, that girl knows nothing, anyway."

"I tell you she means to help the doctor in his crazy plan of notoriety. She means to undo all our work in his own interests," cried Myers vehemently.

Joan walked away. She had overheard unwillingly, and enough to convince her that there was a mystery, with Myers at the bottom of it, and she had rightly sensed an enemy in him, and he in her. Now her mind was resolute to remain and fight for Lancaster. It was as if her decision, suddenly crystallized, had suddenly grown crystal-clear.

But she had not passed the entrance when the matron's door swung open violently and Myers came out. He stood confronting Joan with his insulting leer.

"Miss Wentworth," he began, "when you and I had our talk this morning you hadn't seen the doctor. You didn't know how things were situated, and I don't blame you. Now you've seen that the doctor needs a guardian. Well, I'm his guardian."

"I do not think that Doctor Lancaster needs a guardian, Mr. Myers," answered Joan, facing him steadily.

"See here, now, Miss Wentworth," said Myers, swallowing hard. "You don't get the drift of things, just as I thought. You think I'm trying to stand in the way of your work, when I'm only trying to reach a sort of working agreement to keep things in running order. That's my aim. Am I right?"

"I don't know whether you are right. I think you are extremely unkind. Take off your hat!" flashed Joan.

Myers removed the hard hat from his head and stared at her in astonishment. He could not understand her sudden initiation of hostilities.

"Well, I reckon that's my nature, and I'm sorry," he said. He was trying to be conciliatory now. "I'm sorry if I get on your nerves, Miss Wentworth," he persisted, "but I wasn't brought up to be a ladies' man. However, I know my job, and I reckon you know yours. If you think I'm trying to stand between the doctor and you, come and see him right now."

"I have no complaint to make, and I have made none," said Joan.

"Come and see him," persisted Myers. "You're the nurse, and I guess it's up to you."

She looked at him, dismayed by his expression. "Is Doctor Lancaster worse?" she asked.

"Well, nothing that I didn't expect, but he might be better," said Myers, sneering.

He walked toward the door of Lancaster's room and opened it. Through the aperture Joan saw Lancaster stretched out in a large chair, his head bent forward on his breast, his limbs immobile. She hurried into the room.

But Myers preceded her to Lancaster's side. He raised the limp arm and turned up the sleeve. Joan saw that the skin was densely scarred with tiny punctures. Lancaster was breathing heavily, and beside him, upon a little table, was a syringe, and near that a little bottle containing a few drops of a pale fluid. Joan drew in her breath quickly. It was what she had feared.

"Morphine," said Myers. "He always does this when he comes home. Now you understand what I was trying to get at this morning, Miss Wentworth. I'm responsible for him. It's my job to keep him straight if I can. When I can't, I try. Now you see, perhaps, why he's lost his will power, and why I have to keep after him like a dog following his master. And I guess you won't think I'm trying to set him against you."

The bully in the man was coming to the surface again. He thrust out his head toward Joan.

"Because, if you do, I may as well say, Miss Wentworth, I'm the boss here. Understand that?" he continued, with a blustering air. "The doctor hires all sorts of people when he's like this, and it doesn't mean nothing. He can't pay out no salaries unless my O. K.'s on the vouchers. We want a nurse, and if you like to stay on you can. But if you stay you help me so far as the doctor's concerned, and you do what I tell you. That's straight. Is it clear or isn't it?"

Joan looked at him indifferently. "Help me put Doctor Lancaster on the bed," she said, "and then run and get me a hot-water bottle."

He scowled furiously, but he obeyed her. And all the while Joan sat at Lancaster's side watching him, her mind ran over the questions that were puzzling her.

Why had Myers spoken of Lancaster as coming home, when he lived in Avonmouth?

Who had hired him to be the doctor's keeper?

And with whom had Doctor Lancaster been speaking so bitterly in his consulting room that evening when Joan called at the house?

upon the problem again. Lancaster had taken an immense overdose, one inconceivable in the ordinary morphine habitue. And he must have taken it during the brief period when Myers was with him; he must have taken it as soon as he got back to his room. Why had Myers permitted it?

At last Lancaster opened his eyes. His gaze fell upon Joan's face, at first without recognition, then with wonder.

"Water!" he gasped, after a few ineffectual attempts to speak.

Joan drew a glassful and gave it to him, and then another. Lancaster gulped down the liquid greedily. Presently he sat up, stood on his feet, and groped his way to the chair.

"I'm sorry," he said, looking at Joan with a whimsical expression. "I should have told you."

"Doctor Lancaster, I am ashamed of you," said Joan.

"God knows I'm ashamed of myself," he burst out fretfully. "Miss Wentworth, in the third drawer of that desk, beneath a pile of letters, you'll find a bottle—"

"No," said Joan decisively.

She knew by the wholly unnecessary secrecy in the concealment, characteristic of the drug habitue, that Lancaster had gone a long way down the declivity.

"Miss Wentworth, you misunderstand me. It's an antidote for alkaloidal poisoning. I was experimenting with a new drug."

Joan found herself sobbing, and she was astounded. It was the wreck of the man's moral nature that was unbearable. She saw the latent fineness in him, and it was as if the needless lie was the voice of the morphine devil that spoke through his lips.

Lancaster looked distressed. "Miss Wentworth, you had better leave me and go back to Avonmouth on the evening train," he said. "I ought never to have brought you here. It was pure selfishness on my part. Miss Wentworth, please don't cry. Go away now, and we'll talk it over before you start for the station."

"If I go away," wept Joan, "you'll take another hypodermic."

"I pledge you my word of honor no," said Lancaster, with almost ingenuous candor. "I am really not accustomed to such a thing; that is why it knocked me out. I have been suffering from insomnia, and I tried a new alkaloid—not morphine, you know, but a derivative—for the benefit of my patients."

The words came from his lips so glibly that Joan was almost convinced—would have been, had not the first lie been different. She hesitated. She had no intention of leaving the room, but she turned away.

Lancaster misunderstood her action. With incredible swiftness his hand shot out toward the little bottle. He had uncorked it and plunged in the syringe before the girl could snatch it away.

"Your word of honor!" said Joan. He leaned back in his chair and looked at her with amusement.

"Miss Wentworth," he said, "you are a nurse. Surely you are aware that I am not to be trusted, that my word of honor is worthless? That I am essentially devoid of honesty and decency? Don't you know that this accursed thing—he pointed toward the bottle—'robs men of their honor and self-respect, and lowers them beneath the beasts'?"

He spoke as if at a clinic, and quite impersonally; there was the shadow of a whimsical smile about his lips, which twitched, nevertheless, with pain.

"That does not refer to you," answered Joan. "You asked me to help you in the biggest fight of your life. Well, I am going to help you in that fight."

"It is too late," said Lancaster. "Never!" replied Joan valiantly.

"You don't understand, Miss Wentworth. That's the mistake all people make in trying to cure us. Don't you know that a man or woman never becomes a victim to a drug except from sleeplessness, or physical pain, or under stress of mental anguish? If you could cure me the old trouble would still be there. I should fall a victim again. Life is worthless to me, Miss Wentworth," he ended, quite simply.

The truth is out at last. The morphine habit is hard to cure. Will Joan succeed?

Many Legends Treat of Woman's Creation

Woman's first appearance has been a popular subject of legends. The Phoenician myth of creation is founded on the story of Pygmalion and Galatea. There the first woman was carved out of ivory by the first man, and then endowed with life by Aphrodite, says the Kansas City Star.

The Greek theory of the creation of woman, according to Hesiod, was that Zeus, as a cruel jest, ordered Vulcan to make woman out of clay, and then induce the various gods and goddesses to invest the clay doll with all their worst qualities, the result being a lovely thing.

The Scandinavians say that as Odin, Vill and Ve, the three sons of Bor, were walking along the beach they found two sticks of wood, one of ash and one of elm. Sitting down, the gods shaped man and woman out of these sticks, whittling the woman from the elm and called her Erla.

The Greatness of the Little

By REV. H. OSTROM, D. D.
Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Then he which had received the one talent came and said, Lord, I knew Thee that Thou art an hard man, reaping where Thou hast not sown, and gathering where Thou hast not straved: and I was afraid and went and hid Thy talent in the earth; lo, there Thou hast that is Thine.—Matt. 25:24, 25.

In the parable of the talents we have a three-fold lesson on responsibility. Although to one man was given five, to another two, and to another one, yet these amounts of money were committed to every man according to his several ability. The responsibility of each was rated upon the basis of his ability. It is implied that if the last of the three had been capable of investing as much as the first man he would have been entrusted with five talents instead of one. Or, had the first man been endowed only with the ability to properly invest one talent he would not have been allowed the use of five. At the heart of the illustration is this lesson of the evaluation of ability, which is matched with the rating or responsibility, and thoroughly excludes all cheapening of the estimate placed upon our accountability to God.

But the parable admits of nothing exacting. It is with plain words against exacting that the Lord meets the plea of the man with one talent when He says, "Thou knowest that I was an austere man . . . out of thine own mouth will I judge thee." Manifestly no statements can be allowed which are based upon the false and whining plea of exacting. This man is complaining that he is the under-dog. He is a grouch, discounting much because he has not all. Ignoring his responsibility for the one talent, he undertakes to cast the blame for neglecting to use it upon the Lord. There is no jealous word against the man with the five talents; it is simply that he blames his Lord for expecting anything from him when he had committed so little to him. But Jesus makes it plain that responsibility is simply response on ability to do. Not that man has ability to save himself, but that being saved, he is responsible according to ability. Less or more, it is all personal, all individual.

Neither is there here any discounting the man of lesser ability. In the parable the three persons are reckoned upon the basis of equal aptitude and regard. "THOU OUGHTEST" is the rebuke to the man with the one talent. He has one-fifth the responsibility of the man with the five talents, but "THOU OUGHTEST." He is responsible for and has ability to use that amount—ONE TALENT. Because a diamond may rest in the hollow of one's hand, it must not then be rated as of less value than a carload of clinders. There is a Scotch story about a boy, who although poor and hungry and untaught, accepted Christ and was saved; and he gloried in saying that when Jesus said, "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing?" and "are not five sparrows sold for two farthings?" he meant that the extra sparrow was a small one thrown in, and the poor Scotch boy would say, "I am one of those 'thrown in' sparrows." He may rate himself as the thrown-in sparrow, but he, like the sparrow, is not "forgotten" by the Heavenly Father.

The claim, "I knew Thee," clashes with the entire record of all the man says and with what Jesus says about him. Had he so known his Lord, no napkin under ground would have held that talent. What he did believe what he said. The whole outcome of the use or abuse of the trust committed to him hinged upon this. He did not know his Lord.

The kingdom of heaven can have but one King, and He opened a broken heart on the cross of Calvary to make it possible for men to know Him. Had the man in the parable known Him, instead of saying that He reaped where He had not sown and gathered where He had not straved, he would have been overjoyed with hallelujahs because of what had been accomplished for his everlasting welfare.

Who could write down the figures that might result if that one talent, instead of being in the napkin, had been invested? It remains to be seen what God can do with His own, even His own who are of lesser ability. Is it not written, "the base things of the world hath God chosen"? God with anything is glorious. With Him, nothing can be small. Who then shall estimate what God can do with the surrendered soul devoutly investing one talent?

MRS. WM. BUTTS WAS VERY SICK

Gives Full Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for Remarkable Recovery

Wellston, O. — "I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make me strong. I was troubled with my back and sides hurting me till I could not do my work, and whenever I caught cold it made me irregular. Since I have taken the Vegetable Compound my side and back don't bother me and I can do my household work and care for my children now, where before I did not feel like doing anything or going around. After my first child was born about four years ago I saw an advertisement in the paper about the Vegetable Compound. I knew it would help me, but I was afraid to try it because people said it would help you to have children and I knew I was having children fast enough. But I thought if it would help me it would be better to have a whole house full of children and have good health. I became stronger from taking it and my husband says I look like a live woman instead of a dead one. When Spring comes I am going to take your Blood Medicine as I am very thin. I will answer letters from any woman who wishes to ask about your medicine."

Mrs. WILLIAM BUTTS, Wellston, Ohio.

Mr. K. M. Collins of Woodhaven, N. Y., says, "Instead of plodding through my work wearily on account of sick headaches and sour stomach, I now enjoy good health and ambition, I can do more and better work and life is worth living. I have never before given my name to advertise a medicine, but you cannot imagine how different I feel since I discovered Carter's Little Liver Pills."

Carter's Little Liver Pills tonic the whole system through the liver and bowels. They act as a mild and effective laxative, in a gentle manner without any bad after effects.

Wealth Through Misfortune

At the end of life a man finds himself rich, not so much by his fortunes as by his misfortunes. The Persians had a vase of glass which when empty was colorless, but when filled with wine flashed forth many rare pictures. So a bosom empty of a heart of pain makes a lusterless life, but a bosom in which a heart bleeds reveals hidden virtues.—Tilton.

Few Now Have Faith in Legend of St. Swithin

July 15 is observed in England as St. Swithin's day. It is so called because of the legend connected with St. Swithin, bishop of Westminster, and tutor to King Alfred. At his request he was buried in the churchyard of the abbey, where passers-by might tread on his grave, and where the rain from the eaves might fall on it. After his canonization in 865 A. D., it was resolved to remove his remains to the chancel, the customary burial place of the bishops, and July 15 was appointed for the ceremony; but on that day and for forty days thereafter, St. Swithin, to testify to his displeasure, caused rain to fall so heavily that the monks abandoned their design as heretical and blasphemous. From this legend arose the popular superstition in England that if rain falls on July 15 it will continue to do so for the forty days succeeding. Careful records kept at Greenwich observatory for many years, however, show the superstition has no foundation in fact.—Kansas City Star.

Feel Achy After Every Cold?

ARE you lame and stiff; tired and nervous—constantly troubled with backache and twinges of pain? Have you given any attention to your kidneys? Grip, colds and chills, you know, are apt to be mighty hard on the kidneys. And if the overtaxed kidneys fail to properly filter the blood, impurities accumulate and throw the whole system out of tune. Then may follow daily backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and annoying kidney irregularities.

In such conditions a good stimulant diuretic should help the kidneys flush the poisons out of your system. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. Are recommended by folks you know. Ask your neighbor!

An Illinois Case

John Schore, plasterer, 203 W. Delaware St., Dwight, Ill., says: "When I caught cold, it settled in my kidneys and weakened them. My back ached. When I bent over, sharp pains darted through my back and I could hardly straighten. My kidneys were weak and I had to get up at night to pass the secretions. I used Doan's Pills and they got right at the trouble and in a short time I felt better."

75% of disease avoided through internal cleanliness

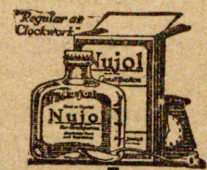

WHEN you are constipated, poisoned, sons are formed in the accumulated food waste, and reach all parts of the body. The first results, headaches, biliousness, a feeling of "heaviness", etc., serve as warnings of praver diseases to follow if this intestinal poisoning continues unchecked.

This is why intestinal specialists state that constipation is the primary cause of three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste, and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Lesson for March 15

OUR LORD'S RESURRECTION

LESSON TEXT—John 20:1-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—"The Lord is risen indeed."—Luke 24:34.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Rises From the Dead.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Risen From the Dead.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christ's Victory Over Death.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Proofs of the Resurrection of Jesus.

The resurrection of Christ is one of the foundation truths of Christianity. Its entire superstructure stands or falls upon its reality. It is the grand proof that Christ was what He claimed to be, the Messiah, the Son of God (Matt. 12:39-40; John 2:19-21). His resurrection authenticated his claims. If Jesus did not rise from Joseph's tomb, He was not the Son of God, nor a true prophet (He said frequently while alive that He would arise), neither a Savior; not even a good man, for He would then be a falsifier. However, if He did arise, all that He said concerning Himself is true. His resurrection declared Him to be the Son of God with power (Rom. 1:4).

I. The Empty Tomb (vv. 1-10).

John does not enter into a description of the resurrection of Christ, but says the tomb was empty, and that Jesus had repeatedly manifested Himself after the tomb was found empty. To see the body of Christ with a spear thrust and nail prints, and then the empty tomb was all that faith needed.

1. The Testimony of Mary Magdalene (vv. 1-2).
This woman out of whom Jesus had cast seven demons (Mark 16:9; Luke 8:2), announced the fact of the empty tomb to Peter and John. Prompted by great love to Him for His kindness to her, she went early to the tomb even "when it was yet dark." "She was last at the cross, and first at the grave. She stayed longest there and was soonest here." This woman's love for the Master was genuine though her knowledge as to His resurrection was defective. She had realized great good at His hand, therefore she could not rest until she had done her utmost for Him.

2. Personal Investigation by Peter and John (vv. 3, 10).
The news of the empty tomb which Mary brought with breathless haste so moved John and Peter that both ran to investigate. When John came to the empty tomb he gazed into it, but Peter entered in. This investigation convinced them. The removal of the stone from the sepulcher and the arrangement of the grave clothes convinced them that the enemy could not have done this.

11. The Manifestation of the Risen Lord (vv. 11-29).
1. To Mary Magdalene (vv. 11-18).
(1) Mary Weeping at the Empty Tomb (v. 11). Peter and John went home, but Mary could not. She stood weeping. Home was nothing to her while her Lord was missing. Earnest love need not weep long for Jesus is found of those who love Him. She should have been rejoicing that the grave was empty, for the empty tomb was eloquent proof of His messiahship and deity. Had His body been there she would have had real cause for weeping.

(2) Mary Questioned by the Angels (vv. 12-13). She viewed through her tears angels at the tomb who inquired as to the cause of her sorrow. She replied, "Because they have taken away my Lord and I know not where they have laid Him."
(3) Jesus Reveals Himself to Mary (vv. 14-16). She first saw the angels and then her eyes lighted upon the Lord. As soon as He called her by name she recognized Him and fell at His feet weeping.

(4) Jesus Forbade Her to Touch Him (v. 17). This showed that she was coming into a new relationship to Him; besides there was not time for such familiarity while the disciples were in darkness. "Go tell my brethren," was the message she must carry.
(5) Mary's Testimony (v. 18). She told the disciples that she had seen the Lord.

2. To the Disciples (vv. 19-29).
(1) When Thomas Was Absent (vv. 19-23).
a. His message of peace (v. 19).
b. He showed His hands and His side (v. 20).
c. He commissioned them (v. 21).
d. He defended the power that was bestowed upon them (v. 23).

(2) When Thomas Was Present (vv. 24-29).
a. Victory of sight and touch (vv. 24-25).
b. Greater blessings for those who believe, not having seen (v. 29).

A Prayer

Father, we thank Thee that Thou hast called us to work for Thee, and we pray that Thou wilt show each one of us just what Thou wouldst have us to do.

Visions

It is well to have a vision of a better life than that of every day, but it is the life of every day from which elements of a better life must come.—Maeterlinck.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BOTTLING SUNLIGHT

WHETHER Moses or some other man wrote the book of Genesis is for Biblical experts and critics to decide. Whoever wrote it says that before any life appeared on the new world God said, "Let there be light." Whether God made the universe in six days, as the orthodox say or in six hundred million years, as geologists say, doesn't matter. That's a question of detail. What does matter is that the more man knows the more he realizes that before there is any life there must be light.

And in our universe the only light there is, is sunlight. Wood, candles, coal, oil, electricity, all depend on sunlight.

What sunlight is we do not know. It is not the simple thing it was thought to be for centuries. We know there are some rays in sunlight that are invisible to the human eye but which can be detected by special instruments. There are probably many more of whose existence we have not even guessed.

Neither do we know much about the effect of sunlight. But we do know something about the effect of the lack of sunlight.

Rickets is a common disease among children. Fifty per cent of all breast-fed babies and nearly 100 per cent of bottle-fed babies will develop it unless proper treatment is used. It is caused by lack of lime and phosphorus in the growing body. Cod liver oil has long been used in its treatment. Then it was found that cod liver oil, after being exposed to the sun, gave off ultra-violet rays which affect a photographic plate. So the oil must have absorbed these invisible rays and given them off to the body.

Then the investigators went a step further. They exposed other oils, such as cotton seed oil, to sunlight, and found that it, too, gave off ultra-violet rays after exposure and caused a rapid and complete cure when given to animals suffering from rickets.

Apparently the oil absorbs the sunlight and then gives off its healing rays after it is taken into the child's body.

And now Dr. Henry Steenbock, professor of agricultural chemistry at the University of Wisconsin, finds that placing food in the sunlight will give it growth-promoting qualities which it formerly did not possess. So the vitamins we have heard so much about may be simply the imprisoned sunshine which is found in leafy vegetables.

CARBON MONOXIDE DEATHS INCREASING

EVIDENCE of the danger of carbon monoxide continues to accumulate. Almost every morning paper tells of at least one case of death from automobile exhaust gas. The United States public health service has issued a special bulletin on the subject. Many state and city health departments have warned the public of this danger. Yet needless and preventable deaths still occur.

Everyone who owns or drives an automobile or auto truck should know that any internal-combustion engine, in burning gasoline, generates and throws off a poisonous gas, carbon monoxide, which will kill anyone exposed to it in a few minutes. If the carburetor is properly adjusted and the combustion of the gasoline is complete, there is less gas given off and so less danger.

But if the carburetor is not properly adjusted or if the mixture fed to the machine is too "rich," then more gas is generated with greater risk.

In the open air, with a wind blowing, the gas is blown away before it can do any harm. But even outdoors no one should crawl under a car in which the engine is running and the exhaust open.

In a closed space, such as a garage, the engine of a car will generate enough gas to overcome one in a few minutes. Engines should never be allowed to run in a garage, unless the doors and windows are open enough to get a through-and-through draft to carry out the gas.

Carbon monoxide is produced in other ways than by gasoline engines. Most of the cases of gas poisoning in this country, at least in previous years, are due to fuelless gas stoves, gas grates and gas heaters without drafts. Gas hot-plates and cooking stoves used in rooming houses, gas water heaters in bathrooms and the so-called "radiant heaters" are the most dangerous.

In Ohio alone, in the winter of 1922-23, carbon monoxide poisoning caused 61 deaths of which 42 were due to gas heaters.

Any gas heater or cooking stove should have a flue of some kind to carry off the gas that is produced by combustion. Water heaters in bathrooms are particularly dangerous on account of the small size of the rooms and the fact that the doors and windows are usually kept tightly closed while the heater is running. A water heater can generate enough gas in 15 minutes to cause suffocation.

Carbon monoxide is colorless, tasteless and odorless. Don't run any kind of a gasoline engine or gas stove in a closed room.

TACNA-ARICA ROW IS PUT TO VOTE

President Coolidge Hands Down Decision as Mediator.

Washington.—The historic Tacna-Arica boundary dispute between Chile and Peru, which has threatened the peace of South America for thirty years past, was advanced toward final solution by the decision of President Coolidge, as arbitrator, that the ultimate disposition of the contested provinces should be by popular vote.

Conditions were fixed for holding the plebiscite which involved the determination of a number of important matters, such as those affecting the qualifications of voters and the supervision of the vote. Some of these matters, the opinion shows, were in accordance with the contentions of Chile, and others in accordance with contentions advanced at one time or another by Peru. All of them, it was asserted, were decided in the interest of a fair and free election which would truly represent the will of the people of the former Peruvian provinces of Tacna and Arica, which have been held by Chile, subject under the terms of the treaty of Ancon, which ended the war between the two countries in 1884, to a plebiscite to be held after ten years.

Grain Reserves Are Far Below Normal

Chicago.—Farm reserves of wheat and corn on last March 1, according to the report issued by the Department of Agriculture, at Washington on Monday, were the smallest on record. Wheat stocks were smallest in 20 years, with but one exception, while stocks of corn were lightest in 30 years, excepting in four years.

Wheat farm reserves were given at 113,928,000 bushels, compared with 137,717,000 bushels on the same day last year. Besides this deficit in the hands of growers, the report said, wheat stocks in country mills and elevators on March 1 were only 69,065,000 bushels, against 98,283,000 bushels last year. Total deficit in the two positions was 57,007,000 bushels, compared with last year. Corn farm reserves were placed at 801,600,000 bushels, or 352,238,000 bushels less than on March 1 last year, when the holdings were 1,153,847,000 bushels.

Farm stocks of oats were reported at 550,342,000 bushels, or 109,000,000 bushels in excess of those of a year ago. In addition stocks of hay were reported at 37,386,000 tons or 3,931,000 tons more than a year ago.

Senator Couzens Told He Owes U. S. Ten Million Tax

Washington.—Reversing a ruling made under the Wilson administration, the internal revenue bureau has served notice on Senator Couzens (Rep., Mich.) that he is subject to an additional tax assessment of between $10,000,000 and $11,000,000 on profits made in the sale in 1919 of his holdings in the Ford Motor company to Henry Ford.

Disclosure of this huge assessment of back taxes was made on the floor of the senate by Senator Couzens, who charged that the action is an attempt by the Treasury department to intimidate and discipline him because of his activity in investigating the internal revenue bureau.

Senator Couzens read to the senate a memorandum handed him by Commissioner of Internal Revenue David H. Blair. The memorandum revealed the details of the transaction involving the sale of minority holdings of stock in the Ford company.

Rooster Could Count

A class in experimental psychology at the University of Chicago has found that a rooster can count. Kernels of corn were arranged in rows on the floor, every third kernel being acked down. The rooster discovered his and passed up the stationary kernels. Then the third kernels were oosened and the rooster was set at his task. He skipped them until his foot struck one, when, with a chuckle, he returned and ate all the kernels.

THE TREND IN FARM LABOR SUPPLY AND DEMAND

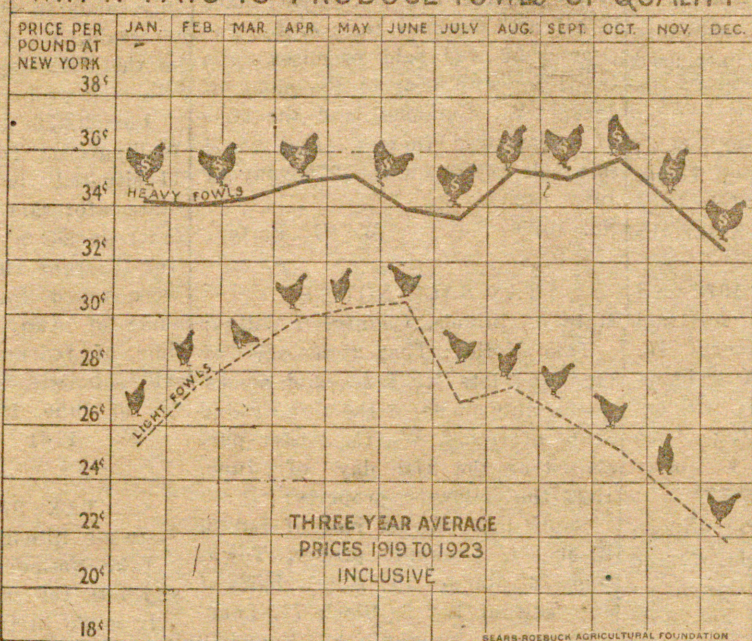

Farmers are cutting down hired help. The demand is estimated at only 89 per cent of normal as compared with 95 per cent a year ago, according to a Foundation based on data received from the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The power of farm products has forced the farmer to reorganize his operations. He is coming to depend largely on his own and his family's labor. In many cases the hired man is being dispensed with entirely.

Farm help costs more today than at any other time in the past sixty-one years. Wages demanded are higher than a year ago and rates for 1923 averaged above all preceding years. The peak year in the wage scale was in 1920. That year labor was scarce. According to the accompanying chart, in June of 1920 the supply was but 73 per cent of normal, while the demand was 105 per cent of normal. During the latter half of 1920 and through the first six months of 1921, the labor supply curve took a sudden upward swing, and in June of 1921 it was 95 per cent of normal, while demand had dropped to 87 per cent. In June of 1922 the supply curve continued to rise, reaching its height at 105 per cent of normal, while the demand was but 89 per cent normal.

With the beginning of 1923 city labor wages improved. Large industrial centers drew farm help cityward. Farmers had to pay wages out of proportion to what the farm could earn to hold their men. In June of 1923 the demand saw 95 per cent of normal, while the supply curve was sagging to 84 per cent. The latter half of the year demand lessened, due to excessive labor costs and the increasing supply. This year demand has made still further decline, until now it is but 81 per cent of normal, while labor supply, which is gradually increasing, is estimated around 89 per cent.

WHY IT PAYS TO PRODUCE FOWLS OF QUALITY

It's the extra pound of flesh on the fowl that cheapens production costs and commands a premium price for the poultryman. According to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation the extra pound can be put on for from 5 to 7 cents, which increases the value of each pound to the consumer by making the entire carcass more plump and attractive, so it commands a fancy price over lighter birds. Heavy hens sell from 5 to 11 cents more than light hens. It's true all down the line—turkeys, ducks, capons, hens and young fry—the extra pound brings the extra dollar.

Over a period of three years the New York market shows heavy fresh-killed milk-fed fowls or hens weighing 5 pounds or over to average from 4 to 11 cents higher per pound than the light fowls weighing 3 pounds. The five-year average for the month of September shows the heavy fowls to average 9 cents over the light weight, the margin broadening during October and November, reaching its height in December, when the heavy fowls range to 11 cents a pound over the light weights.

The average weight of the ordinary fowl as it comes from the farm is 3 1/4 to 4 pounds. The poultryman with the eye for business will add an extra pound or so and receive the top prices. The farmer who takes thin, underfed poultry to market is beating himself.

And Tankins. Ted Tankins says he never could figure that "daylight saving" compensated for the loss of time by people in a railroad station who were trying to find out exactly when a train left.

SALE BILLS

You Own It!

There is a certain pride in possession. Often, however, we are owners of things of which we are not fully aware. Do you realize that one of the greatest properties of its kind in the world belongs to you? Do you know that you are the owner of the University of Illinois?

Tens of thousands of citizens from all sections of the state go each year to visit the university, a large number of them to remain several days. Even so, unless they make a particular study of the institution and its work, they cannot grasp in so short a time the magnitude, yet simplicity of it all.

They know of its teaching, for they see the ten-thousand-odd students going from class to class at all hours of the day; but they cannot see the other things—the administrative organization and how it functions, or the many conferences and meetings being attended throughout the state by extension specialists of the university. Neither can they see the great things being accomplished in research, because the problems on which most of the scientists are working seem unimportant to the casual onlooker and there is no great show of activity. But more important, the visitors do not always learn of the great discoveries that the university has made in the past and some of which may be nearing completion.

But whether they see these latter things or not, they are going on day after day and year after year, paying large dividends for the education they receive, but which make our lives more worth living and justify many times over the outlay the taxpayers are making in behalf of their chief educational institution.

The University of Illinois, because of its present work and past accomplishments, is one of the world's leaders. We should feel proud that we own it!

The God above us all, should success or failure attend their efforts, their labors will not have been in vain. The far reaching results of the Sunday evening assembly will only be fully realized as time with its unfolding panorama of events bring to us the fruits of the experiment. Let us "get together", all for one and "one for all."

LAPLAND LOVE TALE

PROVIDES BASIS OF NEW FOX OFFERING.

What critics have declared to be one of the prettiest love stories of a generation forms the basis of the Wm. Fox photoplay "The Blizzard" adapted from "The Story of a Country House" by Selma Lagerlof, winner of the Noble award for literary achievement. The picture comes to the Marley church on March 20th.

The story deals with the love of young Gunnar Hede for the girl of the minstrel troupe. To recuperate his fortunes, he ventures into the far north to return with a herd of reindeer which the natives covet for meat, milk and hides. He is caught in the mist of the milling, raring beasts, that the youth loses his mind. Returning to his own parish he is a harmless imbecile, pitied and scorned. But the girl continues to love him and one day playing her violin, brings his mind to a return of sanity. He remembers his past and the ending, of course, brings a marriage and assurance of worldly comfort.

Discoveries Affect Living Conditions

Lives of Most of Us Are Safer and Happier as Result of Engineering Research.

Research results which touch the lives of most every person, although often not realized by them, have been discovered by the University of Illinois engineering experiment station and have been incorporated in building projects of many lines, in railroad operation and maintenance, in the construction of buildings, in heating our homes, and in other ways too numerous to mention.

Many of these important contributions go back several years; some of them are just being introduced.

As soon as these new facts are discovered and conclusively proved, they are given to the world in printed form. The civil, railway or construction engineer applies them to his special work and as a result our house lasts longer because of these Illinois discoveries, the office building in which we work is safer because of them, we ride with greater safety on the railroad trains, we enjoy better roads, and we are able to hear an address better in large halls. Soon we will enjoy improved radio.

Such discoveries, eagerly seized and accepted by the engineer, are important not only because they improve our living conditions but because they make us economically richer. It is impossible, of course, to set a definite dollar-and-cents value on discoveries of this sort.

However, a leading authority in the state once said that if one of these contributions, namely, the Parr low-temperature process for coking Illinois coal, proved as successful on a commercial scale as it had in laboratory tests, it would "be worth more to the state and nation than all the money the state will appropriate to the university in the next 100 years." Every indication points to complete commercial success of the project.

Thirty-eight important research investigations are now under way in the engineering experiment station of the university, in addition to ten very important projects known as "Co-operative Investigations."

Of the thirty-eight, five relate to Ceramic Engineering, such as "the aging of clays" and "a study of phosphate cements"; five relate to Civil Engineering, including "impact stresses on highway bridges" and "structural effects of vibration," while four touch on Electrical Engineering, including several "radio observations." In Mechanical Engineering eleven projects are under investigation such as research in "mechanical refrigeration" and "heat transmission through boiler tubes."

Several important studies are being made by the Mining Engineering department, while in Municipal and Sanitary Engineering the problems being investigated relate to concrete, house plumbing, etc. The most interesting, from the layman's viewpoint, of the work being carried on by the department of physics is the radio tube work and the study of the acoustics of buildings. Four lines of investigation are being carried on by the Railway Engineering department.

The co-operative investigations are so termed because manufacturing concerns are so much interested in the solution of certain problems upon which they contribute money or materials, or both, to the university for carrying on this work. Among these are the "Fatigue of Metals Investigations," "Warm Air Furnace Research," "Hudson River Vehicular Tunnel Investigation," "An Investigation of Molding Sand Characteristics," "Co-operative Coal Mines Investigations," "Investigations of Stresses in Railway Track," "Drainage Investigations," "Railroad Signal Research," "Gas Engineering" and "Public Utilities Investigation."

Bigger Corn Yields

Tests made by the University of Illinois, on 12 experiment fields located in different parts of the state, show that the use of limestone and the growing of sweet clover as a green manure crop swelled the yield of corn more than 11 bushels an acre. This was an average for all 12 fields over a period of eight years. During those same eight years Illinois grew an average of 2,500,000 acres of corn annually. On the basis of the results from the 12 experiment fields the universal use of limestone and sweet clover would swell the total annual production in Illinois by more than 107,350,000 bushels.

The value of all such experiments lies in more efficient production rather than in increased total production. By increasing his acre yield of corn the farmer can devote less land to this crop and more to legumes, thereby improving his rotation system and paving the way for sound soil program.

The growth of the college of law of the University of Illinois for the past three years interests members of the Illinois bar. There are 254 students in that college, 54 more than last year and 111 more than 1922. There are nine full-time men on the law faculty.

The proportion of women students in the state university is small. Two thousand six hundred ninety-one women are enrolled at Urbana-Champaign and 51 in the Chicago departments.

Man and the Flowers.

The fragrance of plants is not for man's pleasure; it is a means of attracting insects to fertilize them. The object of many present-day florists is to improve a flower in its coloring, size and substance—in short to "paint the lily." They cannot improve the fragrance, which is perhaps the reason they seem to care so little for its disappearance under their handling.—Exchange.

Coughs and Chest Colds Yield Quickly to Old Time Treatment

Physicians now say that the best cough medicine is one that quickly throws off the cause—congestion and mucus. When this is done the severe cough is usually relieved in a very short time.

This is exactly the action of that old time tried and proved cough medicine, Dr. Bell's Pine Tar Honey. Doctors say the pine tar is hard to beat for quickly loosening and removing the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing, while the honey not only gives a pleasant taste, but helps soothe the soreness and irritation. But be sure you get the genuine Dr. Bell's Pine Tar Honey and not some substitute. Dr. Bell's is the original and has been known for many years as the best. It is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine tar, honey and other quick-acting ingredients which the best doctors have found to aid in bringing quick relief. Contains no opiates or other harmful drugs, so can be given even to young children—fine for spasmodic croup. If you want the best—a medicine that often relieves a stubborn cough overnight—get Dr. Bell's. Costs only 30¢ at all good druggists.

Farm Production Falling Off

Population is gaining on crop production, according to a study made over a period of thirty-four years by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, based on figures of the United States Department of Agriculture. The accompanying chart shows crop production per capita is falling.

Taking the average of 1910 as 100, total crop production in the last three years averaged 106.3. Owing to the growth of population, per capita production has been only 92.3 when 100 represents the 1910-1914 average.

The chart shows index numbers of both total and per capita production of crops from 1890 to 1923. The production record is based on the total yield of 10 crops—corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, buckwheat, potatoes, hay, tobacco and cotton, which include more than 95 per cent of the total acreage of all crops. Since yields are expressed in various units, bushels, bales, tons and pounds, the crops are combined by applying a constant average price to the yearly production of each crop.

UNIVERSITY PAYS LARGE DIVIDENDS, SAYS EDITORIAL

Chicago Herald and Examiner Believes Illinois Doing Great Work.

In an editorial entitled "Cash Dividends From Education," the Chicago Herald and Examiner has this to say:

"There was a time when 'book learning' was viewed with skepticism by the average business man. Times have changed.

"Today we find some of the biggest concerns in the world not only accepting the college graduate into their organizations with expectancy that he will be valuable, but also asking great educational institutions to help them solve some of their problems of production.

"A short time ago there was dedicated at the University of Illinois an educational research residence, funds for the erection of which were furnished by the National Warm Air Heating and Ventilating association, an organization made up of manufacturers of warm air furnaces and ventilating equipment. This is a three-story house of ten rooms, completely furnished so as exactly to reproduce interior conditions in any other residence and equipped with a warm air furnace of sufficient capacity to heat a building of this size.

"This residence will be used for the purpose of continuing and elaborating the program of research into warm air heat and ventilation problems which started at the University of Illinois since that time by the engineering experiment station of the university and the National Warm Air Heating and Ventilating association.

"During the five years of research work some noteworthy facts have been developed. One is that if heating pipes in the basement are to be covered at all they must be well covered. Poor insulation, in the tests already conducted by the university, proved less effective for heating purposes than bright tin pipes without insulation. Insulation should be at least as good as can be obtained with two layers of air-cell asbestos covering.

"Another noteworthy piece of knowledge obtained was that poorly designed and arranged cold air ducts may decrease the heating capacity of the plant as much as 25 per cent. A good arrangement for cold air ducts provides for short feeders of large size and free from right-angle turns and obstructions.

"These facts alone were considered important enough by furnace manufacturers to make it worth while to contribute money for the erection and equipment of the research residence that was dedicated the other day.

"Almost every one in the state is familiar with the research work the university carries on in agriculture. But the foregoing facts will show the changing attitude on the part of big business toward educational institutions and tend to prove that, aside from teaching, great universities like the University of Illinois pay handsome dividends on the money invested in them."

Most Difficult Things in Life.
A Danish paper recently asked the readers to state what is the hardest thing in the world to do. It received many more replies than it had anticipated, some of which are as follows:

To be a toe dancer if you weigh 200 pounds, to get back borrowed books, to trim one's nails while wearing boxing gloves. Some of the readers took the question seriously and answered it seriously. One replied that to live without telling a lie was the most difficult of all.

Regular German services are held every Sunday and church holiday at 10 o'clock. Subject for next Sunday's sermon: "My Kingdom is Not of This World." English services are conducted every last Sunday in the month at 7:30 o'clock. The next service will be held March 29th.

The ladies aid society, in its meeting last Sunday decided to repair the interior of the church and to decorate it and have it painted. This work will be done immediately after the Easter holidays.

A birthday party was held in honor of Mr. Christian Schilling last Wednesday. A large number of relatives and friends were present. Bunco was played after which a fine lunch was served.

On Thursday a large number of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. John Bormet to remind her of her birthday. The evening was spent in playing bunco and other games. After an excellent mid-gamesnight lunch the guests departed wishing many happy returns of the occasion to the honored one.

Mr. Philip Breitbarth is one of the many who celebrate their birthday in March. His many friends called on him last Saturday and duly celebrated the event.

The Christ Dreier family of Oak Forest moved to Forest Park last Saturday. The family was highly esteemed by all who knew them and leave the vicinity.

In spite of the rain last Sunday Mr. Adam Breitbarth and wife entertained a large number of friends. Bunco and other games were enjoyed as well as the splendid lunch which followed. All present had a fine time.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Manzke, a fine baby girl.
